Autumn has arrived, and the world around Alice is changing. The air feels cooler, the days are shorter, and sometimes, change makes her feel uncertain. But Sunny the sausage dog is always close by, ready with a wag of his tail and comforting words.

Together, they find joy in quiet moments – the crunch of leaves, the reassurance of a favourite story, and the kindness of friends. Sunny may be little, but he has big thoughts and, most importantly, a big heart. With his gentle advice, Alice learns that comfort is all around her: in love, in laughter, and in the turning of the seasons.

With enchanting illustrations and lyrical prose by Jake Biggin, this timeless book reminds us that we're not alone, and that friendship, love, and acceptance can light even the chilliest days.

However, the mist that creeps along the coast conceals more than just the deadly rock faces, as a killer stalks the night.

Soon Eben uncovers a terrifying truth – Niflheim isn't just an island, it's a gateway to something much darker. To save the world from fracture, Eben must embrace the frightening thing he is becoming. But some secrets are buried for a reason and once the truth is out, there is no crawling back.
